After rebuffing Tyler Boyd's romantic interest for months, Jennifer Schaible finally gave her smitten Texas A&M classmate a chance. And boy is she glad she did. "It turned out to be the best decision I ever made," says Jennifer, now a dance instructor, and, of course, Tyler's adoring wife.

HER FONDEST MEMORIES INCLUDE "WALKING INTO THE CORINTHIAN AND SEEING HOW BEAUTIFULLY PUT TOGETHER EVERYTHING WAS."

Following a rehearsal dinner at Minute Maid Park, and a bridesmaids' luncheon at Ouisie's Table, Jennifer and Tyler tied the knot in a candlelit ceremony at The Corinthian, the groom handsomely turned out in attire from Al's Formal Wear. One of the ceremony's most touching moments came when the bride's mother presented Jennifer with her bridal bouquet, with the bride's mother's and late father's wedding bands attached.

Following the intimate ceremony, guests gathered in The Corinthian's Mezzanine, which was outfitted with columns of foliage, lilac and purple tulips for the grand occasion. The event was coordinated by Jill Fortney Productions. Guests sipped fine wines, Champagne and cocktails, including specialty mango, pear-and-lychee, and "wedding cake" martinis, and helped themselves to butler-passed and station-served hors d'oeuvre, such as crusted ahi tuna, deviled quail eggs, risotto and chilled fresh seafood, courtesy of world-renowned catering firm and Corinthian proprietor Jackson and Company.

After the cocktail reception, celebrants regrouped in the Grand Hall for a sumptuous four-course dinner that included a composed salad of endive and basil garnished with strawberries and pear gelee, and an entree of filet mignon with cognac-truffle sauce. Diners particularly enjoyed a lavish cheese course that featured freshly made farmer's cheese and aged Stilton, with an abundance of gourmet garnishes.

Following the cutting of the wedding cake, guests indulged in an incredible display of desserts, flowers and chocolate roses created especially for Jennifer and Tyler.

FOLLOWING THE CUTTING OF THE CAKE, GUESTS INDULGED IN AN INCREDIBLE DISPLAY OF DESSERTS.

At midnight, guests returned to the totally revamped Mezzanine, now done up as a swank lounge and nightclub with mirrored walls, casino games, photo booths, dancing, and more fabulous food, including sliders and fries, mini ice-cream sundaes and milkshakes.

The festivities concluded with a post-wedding brunch at the Four Seasons Hotel on Sunday.

Looking back on her once-in-a-lifetime wedding, bride

Jennifer says her fondest memories include “the morning of the wedding, getting my hair and makeup done with all of my girls—bridesmaids, sisters, my mom and Tyler’s mom and sister,” and “walking into The Corinthian and seeing how beautifully put together the entire room was, then walking down the aisle with my brother, seeing Tyler for the first time and having an amazing feeling of relief and happiness.”
